“ I remember as a kid my mom would try n sell us kidz for S&H green stamps or when we got on her nerves she would tell us to go play dodge the cars on the freeway I also remember that before her stroke she wanted to make peanut butter chicken and asked me how she should dilute the peanut butter we agreed on using honey mom was always honest n open she would say you can tell me anything I might not like what you say but I don't wanna be lied to she would love us all unconditionally no matter what we did in life . I will love her forever n never forget her .

I remember her saying she would sell us for green stamps. It's funny the different memories we each have.

I remember playing ring around the roses around her at the bus stop before school. Her making jelly and jams. Playing cards, listening to Elvis records, and playing Aggravation (aka marbles) on the homemade wooden board Dad had made.

“ From the first day I met Lorraine I fell in love with her...always a smile and never could stay mad...as Kevin has mentioned I remember her in the kitchen how dad and I would sneak up behind her to pinch a bite of food and she would pretend to chase us...the funny stories she would share about my dad, his mom and the rest of the kids...memories of the water balloon fight in and outside of the house...how she spoiled all the grand kids and her huge collection of stuff critters and dolls...how she almost fell out of bed laughing when my daughter Carolyn hid in the middle of them when she was a baby and playing hide n seek with Kevin and he couldn't find her...how she always had the coffee pot on <cant remember how many coffee pots dad and her wore out lol> and was willing to talk anytime day or night...even with all the challenges she faced she would always try to smile and tell a funny story....Lorraine you will always have a place in my heart and memory

“ I remember mom teaching me how to cook by sitting at the table and watching her. She always told me to clean as I go because when I was done cooking there would be little mess to clean up. I miss you mom.
