“ Becky and I first met at Walsh grade school when I moved to Lockport in 1972. We went our separate ways after high school and finally reconnected thru Facebook a few years ago. We were able to go to lunch a few times and the years apart just seemed to melt away. She reminded that I was the one who first taught her how to crochet. We would sit and talk for hours over breakfast or lunch. We talked about the past, about her family and my daughter. I had mentioned that my daughter also collected elephants. To my surprise, the next time we got together, she had some to pass on to my daughter. I'm so glad that we were able to pick up where we left off. I will miss her greatly. Until we meet again my friend.....

Thank for sharing your memory. No amount of money can give what you just did. She is my 2nd cousin a in and I hate that I did not talk to her in a while. She took a trip recently to see her dad and sister. That was so out of her element but now it is a reason.
